Little in it's size however worthwhile to watch. The dotted lines keeps some pressure on the price but once removed could symbolize the little brother bottom of the big brother bottom, which took place in December/January. The little brother bottom made a higher low which per se is positive in the formation of a cup with handle. The smart money accumulates the stock up to the green line and then buys the break out above and accumulates even more towards the 0.15 level – redline. You break this one and momentum will carry the stock again to the double – top around the 0.24 level (closing prices) But think of it – As the stock forms higher lows – could one not expect higher highs which then of course would be heralded as a very bullish sign and momentum traders will act accordingly. Why then not buying this stock at a discount. If people see the sign "Sale" they rush into the stores, but if you get the same sign on a stock – people hesitate – no wonder is Baruch's rule still valid who says: People got rich buy buying cheap and selling at a dear price.
